INCOME TAX LESSON

Head of a Family Defined by Treasury Regulation.

Thousands of letters passed in correspondence last year between the bureau of internal revenue and persons claiming an exemption of $2,000 as head of a family. Circumstances surrounding each individual case determine largely whether a person is entitled to such exemption. The fixing of his status decides in many instances, whether his income is taxable or nontaxable. In either event, if his net income for 1920 was $1,000 or more if single, and $2,000 or more if married, he must file a return.

A head of a family is defined by treasury regulations as "a person who supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage or by adoption or whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependents is based upon some moral or legal obligation. A married person living with husband or wife, in addition to the $2,000 exemption allowed such persons, can not claim a $2,000 exemption as the head of a family irrespective of the question of the support of others of the household.

A single person—the term including widows, widowers and persons not living with wife or husband—is the head of a family if he is the sole support of one or more relatives living in the same house with him and if he exercises control of household affairs. The $1,000 additional exemption allowed a single person as the head of a family cannot be divided between two members of a household. A division of responsibility for "control of household affairs" excludes both parties from the claim. Whether a person who does not continuously live in the same house with dependent relatives is entitled to the $2,000 exemption depends upon the character of the separation. If a parent is absent on business part of the year, or a child or other dependent away at school or on a visit the common home being maintained the exemption applies.

If a parent is compelled to maintain his dependent children with relatives or in a boarding house, the exemption may still apply.

If, however, the dependent continuously and without necessity makes his home elsewhere than with his benefactor the latter is not the head of the family irrespective of the question of support.

A taxpayer may not be the head of a family and still be allowed an exemption of $200 for each person dependent upon him for chief support if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support, because mentally or physically defective. The words "physically defective" refer not only to cripples but to persons defective because of old age or ill health. Neither residence, relationship nor legal dependency are factors in determining the right of the taxpayer to such exemption. To establish his claim the taxpayer must have contributed during the year more than one-half of the sum needed for the dependent's support.

The following are concrete examples of circumstances which govern the exemption allowed the head of a family for dependents.

A son who has left home sends his mother more than half the sum required for her support. He is allowed an exemption of $200, unless the mother is able to support herself, in which case the contribution is regarded as a gift.

A son living at home supports an invalid mother in the same household. He is allowed a deduction of $2,000 as the head of the family, plus an additional $200 for his dependent, who is physically incapacitated. (It should be noted that the $200 additional exemption for dependents does not apply to husband or wife, even though either one has become a total burden upon the other.)

A single man lives with and supports a mother 50 years of age, and two sisters, 18 and 21 years of age, all in good health. His exemption is $2,000 as the head of the family. Since his mother and sisters are neither under 18 years of age nor mentally or physically incapacitated, he cannot claim an additional exemption for dependents.

A widower is the entire support of a child under 18 years of age, but otherwise neglects it. His exemption is $1,200. He is not the head of a family, and is entitled only to the $200 for a dependent.

Never Runs on Schedule.
"I suppose the way you folks came in on a landslide makes you feel comfortable and secure," remarked the admiring constituent.

"I feel comfortable," replied Senator Sorghum, "but not secure. My observation has been that while a landslide gives you a mighty swift and exhilarating trip, it is not at all reliable as a regular means of transportation."

'Record to Be Proud Of.
A woman centenarian at Ladore, Eng., who still enjoys a brisk walk, never took a dose of medicine in her life. Her father died at ninety-nine and her mother at ninety-five. She has 14 children, 89 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

Old Water Cisterns Still in Use.
The city of Tunis receives its water supply from the same sources that supplied ancient Carthage, and is even using some of the ancient city's cisterns.
